1. Profiles revamp before next Tiki24 LTS?

- Starting with Profiles Wizard, and later, if needed, Profiles Control Panel.
    - split a part the profiles expected to be applied in a production site to get some extra features without breaking anything, from those that make changes to your site style or similar, which are expected to be applied only in demo/testing mode when reviewing features at the very beginning, etc. Better filtering and sorting will help, and some card-like visual display would also help (like this one prototyped here: Cards - masonry/grid display ).
  - add a menu entry inside menu 42 for wizards, and make it the first of the options
  - set the menu entry in the admin ui backend for the wizards as the first in the list. (if it's the first expected entry point, it should be listed as such consistently everywhere)

2. Re-enable some "quick admin" link at the top bar (module, the simple or the one with the admin bar) for tiki site admins by default in new tiki installs (to be implemented before next Tiki24 LTS). and prevent collision display, if any, when the new admin ui backend is used.

- it's very discouraging to tweak a tiki from scratch without that. In narrow screens, in addition, you don't see the side module with the menu 42 (it's sent to the bottom of the page).

3. Enable Tiki Connect by default since Tiki24 LTS to get more info and contact with tiki site admins out there, what do they use, etc.

- I've recently experienced setting up a new syncthing install. and at the first login attempt, I got a "Tour"-like popup asking me to leave the setting to send anonymous statistics info to the server as enabled, and a link to see what type of results and charts they make with it, and I was ok with that setting as enable once I saw the type of charts and visualization they make with it. etc. Shall we do something similar? (low hanging fruit)

4. Show2.t.o and show3.t.o status? (related to tikiwiki domain issues and wikisuite & virtualmin improvements)?
