Summary
>   We want more people involved in the project so the project enjoy a stronger community and more developers. This is a recurring question is 2021 different from before ?
>
>   - How people get in the project and why they are in this room?
>   - What convince them to use or be interested in Tiki?
>   - Should we focus on user looking for specific features ?
>   - Should we focus on specific candidate type (coders, users, designer, translators, etc) ?
>   - The wiki, CMS, and easy-to-use website generator sphere has changed.
>   - Social networks are here and mature.
>   - It's easier than ever to contribute and Tiki is a kind of "standard" for development.
>   - Should invest resources in communication, infrastructure or fixes ?
>
>   Side discussion
>
>   - Where are those potential users and what do they use today? (if they use something)
>   - What will we "talk" to them about to convince them to try Tiki and join the project?
>   - What about the previous users that left?
